What's Happening Week 12?

We're going to visit some farmers in southwestern France. . . .

And shine light on major 2000+-year-old debates.

We'll also find out which Global Problems you would Fix First: Climate, Inequality, or Hunger.

GENERAL COMMENTS FOR THE WEEK

Sunday Memo: “What’s Happening Week 12?” 🔗

This week Après l'hiver, le printemps (After Winter, Spring) takes us to visit family farmers in southwest France, to the Périgord region of the current Dordogne département where families have farmed their land for generations. We find that there—as in many parts of the globe—they “are forced to confront challenges that threaten the very existence of their small farms.” In Après l'hiver, le printemps we witness “an intimate portrait of an ancestral way of life under threat in a world increasingly dominated by large-scale industrial agriculture.” As my colleague Dr. Jonathan Deutsch of Drexel University notes, it is “a beautifully shot film that takes complex issues of a globalizing food system and makes them relatable, personable and powerful.”

We’ll also take up some persistent 2000+-year-old debates that have been circling the globe for all that time.

And from there we look backwards to catch up, and forwards to drafting your Term Paper and finishing your Presentation.

“In an era of rapid growth of mega-farms, the encroachment of suburbia and new European Union rules and reductions of agricultural subsidies, the farmers in the Périgord region of southwest France are forced to confront challenges that threaten the very existence of their small farms.”

“Their story is recorded by one of their neighbors, an American filmmaker who grew up on her family's farm in Pennsylvania. Inter-weaving her story and theirs, the documentary explores the nature of the farming life and the rapid changes of the last two decades that have impacted the lives of families whose survival is tied to the land.”

“The Périgordine farmers show us that as agriculture moves out of the hands of families who have farmed for generations and into a model of "agriculture as business," something fundamental shifts. This farming community caught between tradition and an uncertain future struggles to hold on not only to their farms but to a set of values that comes of their intimate relationship with the natural world. AFTER WINTER, SPRING reveals the human story of family farming at a turning point in history.”
